"RawPreviewExtractor is an image viewer and a converter for RAW format. It supports plug-ins for image viewing purposes. The program aims at providing RAW data to the JPEG preview that is embedded in the RAW format. Once the preview is extracted, all the images can be viewed and selected, and directly converted into the JPEG format. RawPreviewExtractor includes a file renaming utility, which can be used to change the name of a RAW file." Source: A: There are a few ways. Personally, I use Adobe Lightroom, that lets you create a duplicate with a separate profile (tab) and then you can just convert at a later date (another tab). I do this for any RAW files that I want to keep with an earlier version of a file. The other way is to use a free program called PhotoFiltre, available from here: It lets you merge different RAW files into one image, and then you can convert to the JPEG format once the merged file is created. The present invention relates to a laser welding method and device for laser welding of a metal strip and, more particularly, to a laser welding method and device for laser welding of an elongated metal strip. Laser welding is a process in which a laser beam is used to melt adjacent metal surfaces sufficiently to promote rapid solidification. Although the melting of the metal does not necessarily take place in the form of a welding joint, as in resistance spot welding, the rapid solidification of the molten metal in the welding zone does provide a particularly suitable joint. In addition, the laser beam permits the welding to be carried out with energy absorption of less than 1.0 J/cm². Laser welding of strip material normally takes place by forming a welding sequence on either the strip end which will be joined to the next piece of strip or the piece of strip which is to be joined. If the welding sequence is carried out on the strip end, the stripping of the end prior to the formation of the welding sequence is particularly easy and no special stripping equipment is necessary. The laser beam then melts the end in the welding zone and cooling takes place very rapidly. The end to be welded in this case is the weakest point of the strip material and the weld will be of sufficient strength to retain the joint formed. To
